Google YouTube Inflicts Gender Dysphoria on Kids

Google inflicts gender dysphoria, a mental disease sometimes called transgenderism, on American children¹ on YouTube Kids.² This is where parents expect the content to be safe for children.

On the contrary, YouTube Kids hosts a video channel Queer Kid Stuff, available to children as young as 9. This channel features videos that make children doubt their gender and desire “transitioning.” One video shows little kids and babies at a drag show. The channel has been active since 2016. It is published by CBC Kids News and funded by the Canada Media Fund. Examples are below.

Even worse than placing this content in front of kids, Google hides it from adults. The channel’s content is not archived in archive.org or archive.is. These videos cannot be found without setting up a YouTube Kids account and accepting its terms (at least, letting Google allege that its terms have been accepted). This has a deterring effect on the legal and law enforcement communities and parents of the hurt children.

On the other hand, a child can easily pretend to be a parent and create an account for him/herself and younger kids. Also, many real parents create YouTube Kids accounts for their kids because such monstrous conduct is not expected from such high-profile corporations.

This video was available in January 2023 but is unavailable now (“Sorry, can't play this video. Try watching something else.”). It promotes “transitioning” as if it were an excellent adventure.

It tells children that their sex is not the same as their gender, and so on. It also uses explicit words.

“All ages drag show” needs no explanation. The video shows kindergarten age kids, almost babies, at this show.
